The Latest Styles From Eastern Metropolis

(By Florence Fairbanks)

New York, April 21.—The fine weather of the past weeks has given a powerful impetus to spring and summer styles. The shops show fine displays of the most handsome suits for early summer wear. There can be no doubt any longer that the short coat will dominate during the coming season. The coats of the tailored suits imported from France are much shorter than those of American models. Indeed, some of the latest French importations have a bobbed-off effect below the waist that is anything but graceful. All women, short and tall, stout or slender, looked well in the three-quarter semi-fitted coats of the past few seasons, but the new short coat is dangerous for the stout woman, and she should be wary of allowing her tailor to clip too many inches off the bottom of her jacket in the pursuit of modishness.

Authorities on fashion say that in the case of the simple, mannish type of tailored coats, the bottom of the garment shall come exactly to tips of the fingers when the arms are allowed to hang straight down at the sides. More latitude is allowed in the various modifications of the Russian blouse coats. Of course, the feature of the Russian suit is the patent leather belt. The coat may or may not have a collar, but a belt it must have. The belted coat certainly lends a youthful look to the woman who is sufficiently slender and youthful to wear one, but it makes a stout woman look a perfect caricature.

Some very dainty costumes of that type, in black and white shepherd checked worsteds or mohair are shown in the shops. As a rule they show snappy little touches of solid black in inevitable black patent leather belt. Sometimes, also, there is an effective touch of color—a vivid bit of flame satin or mandarine orange velvet set into the collar; but this touch of vivid color is cleverly subdued and made more piquant by the little black bow which tops a frilly cascade or jabot of lace.

It is reported from Paris that little vests, buttoned under attractive street suits are growing more popular every day. The presence of the vests is due to the fact that many of the new coats have long, rolling collars and button at the waist line. Many of the fashionable shops here are showing dainty vestettes of striped silk for wear with the coats which button low with two or three buttons. These little vestettes are really only a strip of material with pointed ends, which go about the neck and fall over the chest in the manner of the silk protectors worn by men with evening coats. A vestette in striped lavender and white silk, the stripes meeting in a chevron effect at the center, had buttons of pearl, the small button holes being worked with lavender silk.

Every year, as regularly as the winter snows begin to disappear, the rumor is wafted about the land that lingerie blouses are to be utterly tabooed, and just as regularly, as spring arrives, these delectable garments come trooping back into the shops and are eagerly purchased by the very women who had been declaring that they had given them up forever. This year, at the close of winter, the same prediction was made but at present the shops display a large variety of the most charming blouses and they are selling like the proverbial "hot cakes."

There was a time when the lingerie waist was a baggy looking affair, which foamed over the belt at sides, front and back, and so perfectly disguised the lines of the figure that Venus herself would have looked slovenly in it. But the reform which gradually took place has resulted in a garment almost as trim and smart as is a tailored coat. These features are especially noticeable in the new models, which have a shoulder yoke bordered with lace turning at the throat line and running down each side of these dainty confections between fine lines of tucks extending from the yoke to the belt. The military blouses are among the smartest looking of all the new types and are quite as trim as their name implies, for the fronts, entirely of half-inch tucks, close beneath broad bands of heavy lace or boldly patterned embroidery. Similar bands with pointed ends cross the shoulders in epaulet fashion.

High, straight collars trim the necks, and the long sleeves of bands and tuck groupings in entire-deux effect are of conventional shape. Of course, many of the new blouses are such a maze of embroidery, lace and handwork that the woman who has not an unlimited bank account turns from them with despair. Women who are skillful with the needle can easily provide for themselves an exceedingly smart waist by buying a handsome, but plain pattern and doing their own embroidering.

It is quite probable that lace has never been used so generally and for such a large variety of purposes as at the present time. The touch of lace is evident on almost every part of woman's costume. Lace has left the ballroom and the boudoir, and can be seen on the streets in irresistible combination with different parts of an outdoor costume. Few things seem to escape the fascinating frill; the wearers may revel in it to their heart's delight. It is used as an undersleeve for the broadcloth street gown. Eerie lace is gathered into a velvet ribbon band and a ruffle of lace falls over the hand.

Even the hat is under the spell of the lace. The lace has been pleated and is used to outline the velvet buckle form on the front of the hat. There is a certain freshness supplied by lace in this instance; and, moreover, a continuation is possible by the removal of the lace and a return after cleaning. Lace is also used to fill the space between the lapels of the short coat. Net edged with gold lace falls in a becoming plisse.

Blue and white checked linen frocks are made beautiful by the insertion of very coarse Cluny motifs. The breastplate on a curiously cut model with the new high bolero effect is of Cluny. The sleeve panels repeat the design and a skirt panel on each side of the lower skirt holds in the gathered portion of the side gores, suggesting a slight panier. When Cluny lace is inserted, it is merely placed upon the finished model, sewed around its edge with fine stitches and the material beneath it is cut away and the edge rolled.

For morning or afternoon hats there is a decided tendency toward the rough straws. There is something youthful in the appearance, and with this pleasing element goes a sufficiently ornamental character that needs little trimming. A shape of coarse straw, turned up at the side and held there by a straw scarab, dyed to approach the iridescence of the beetle, is certainly an easy and becoming selection for the spring. Then, again, the large flat shape of rough straw is an excellent background for a wreath of field flowers or a bunch of roses. The rough straws are more durable and retain their shape more successfully than the finer weaves. They appear in all of the spring shades and shapes and are willing to meet any reasonable demands.

The recent exhibition of Japanese materials in Paris has given a new impetus to the use of Japanese materials and designs in trimming. Indian and Cashmere designs are also considerably exploited in spring and summer fabrics.

MAYOR

Approves Appointment Of The Humane Officer

For The City And Council
Must Provide Funds

As noted elsewhere in this paper Jacob Lybarger was on Wednesday appointed humane officer for Knox county and also for Mt. Vernon. On Wednesday afternoon Mayor Mitchell approved the appointment for Mt. Vernon which means that Mr. Lybarger will serve as humane officer for another year, commencing May 1.

There has been much discussion in council lately over the salary of Mr. Lybarger for another year as it was the supposition that he would not be reappointed for the city, but as the reappointment has been approved by the mayor it means that the city must provide the funds and pay Mr. Lybarger for another year.

Back of the desire of the people to travel is their mania to lie about what a good time they had doing it.

MERCHANTS

Will Be Asked To Put Down
Hitching Rings

In Front Of Their Places On Main Street

A meeting of the executive committee of the Citizens' association was held on Thursday morning for the purpose of considering among other things, the question of securing hitching rings.

The resolutions of the Pomona Grange, which appeared in Wednesday's Banner, were brought to the attention of the committee as well as the action of the city council on Monday night. In view of their action it was felt that the only course open was to recommend that each merchant and property owner along Main and side streets should replace a number of rings as soon as possible. For this purpose bids will be asked and it is thought that by giving the contract to one person, a better price can be secured for all.

The mayor who was visited by the committee gave his assurance that if the rings were replaced the police force would see that they were not disturbed.

The matter of the proposed traction line from Marion to Mt. Vernon was taken up, but it was decided to sound public sentiment further with a view to action at the next regular meeting of the association.

STRUCK

By A Cab And Knocked To
The Pavement

Rev. Benjamin Tulloss Painfully Injured

Rev. Benjamin Tulloss of West Chestnut street was severely injured o'clock Wednesday evening while taking a walk alone. He was just starting to cross West High street on Mulberry street when he was struck by a cab and knocked down. The cab was being driven at a fairly good rate of speed at the time in order to meet the evening train on the B. & O. and the driver did not see Mr. Tulloss until too late to prevent the accident. The tongue of the vehicle struck him on the back of the head, knocking him down and the front wheel passed over his hip. The quick presence of mind of the driver, who threw the horses down in making the stop, was all that saved the unfortunate man from probably fatal injuries for the back wheels where most of the weight of the cab rests, were stopped only a few inches from his body. Mr. Tulloss was lifted into the cab and taken to the home of Dr. L. W. Armentrout where he has been residing. On examination, it was found that no bones were broken and that the injuries consisted mainly of severe bruises.

STRYCHNINE

Eaten By Little Girl Thinking
It Was Something "Good"

Timely Action Of Physician
Saved Her Life

Very timely action undoubtedly saved the life of Hazel, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Minard, who reside about three miles west of Jelloway, Wednesday afternoon. It is supposed that strychnine had been placed on something to poison mice or rats and the child while playing about the house, discovered it and ate a portion of the poison. Severe illness followed immediately and Dr. Reed of Jelloway was called to the Minard home as soon as possible. Antidotes were administered and the child was revived, but was not considered out of danger for some time. The little girl was resting a great deal easier Thursday afternoon and it is thought that all danger is past.

Latest figures have it that the earth is 400,000,000 years old. We're getting more ashamed of ourselves every minute.
